Our primary objective is to promote women and diversity in international dispute resolution.

1,000 members

25 years

40 countries

Our membership includes female dispute resolution practitioners in any role, including arbitrators, mediators, experts, adjudicators, surveyors, facilitators, counsel, neutrals, ombudswomen and forensic consultants.

Now in its 25th year, ArbitralWomen has become a powerful mechanism for the advancement of women in dispute resolution, increasing their involvement, improving their visibility and promoting gender equality and diversity.

Our members benefit from:

Making connections
Meeting other women in the field, exchanging ideas, and celebrating the future of women in arbitration.

We encourage our members to organise their own networking events. We can help you prepare and provide experienced panelists for a successful ArbitralWomen co-branded event that provides you with increased visibility in the field.

News coverage
Featuring all the recent developments affecting women in dispute resolution. Keeping our members informed of events and news through email alerts and social media.

Mentoring
Pair up with a more experienced member as a ‘critical friend’ who will support and help you develop your career. This programme exemplifies how together, the role of women in the field can continue to grow and strengthen. We also have a Parent Mentorship Programme launched in November 2017.

Showcasing members’ profiles
We list and increase the visibility of practitioners from jurisdictions around the world.

Young ArbitralWomen Practitioners
A forum in which young women practitioners can share experiences and practical advice. Collaboration and knowledge-sharing are vital for bridging the gender gap and advancing women’s careers.

Find a practitioner
We provide the only dedicated search tool to find recommended female dispute resolution practitioners and speakers.

We also provide moot competition support for law students, publications, job listings, training & competitions and diversity programmes.

Make us part of your professional development.
